COLLECTING ADDITIONAL DOCUMENTS IN CAREERS AT UF: FACULTY & POSTDOCS

A common strategy for narrowing down a large applicant pool is a two-stage search. This instruction guide will walk you through the process for requesting additional documents from certain applicants after the pool has been narrowed.

For instance, let’s say that your search has received applications from 100 people. After a first review, the search committee narrows the pool to 20 applicants. From those 20 applicants, the committee wants to request confidential letters of recommendation from only those applicants. Here’s the steps you should take.

NOTE: To use this functionality, the position must have the Applicants may add additional documents box checked. If you did not check this box upon creation of the position, you will need to edit the position to allow for the uploading of additional documents.
